Successfully managing your life can sometimes feel like a juggling act. You might need help:

- balancing your career and family life,
- managing your finances, or
- transitioning from life in one country or situation to another

Whatever your life challenges and well-being needs, we are here to help you and your family. If you’d like in-person support, we can help you make a connection with a skilled professional. And, for on-the-go members, there are phone and digital options for access to support, too.

As an Aetna International member, your employer provided plan provides you with work-life balance support service options – from short-term coaching, guidance and counseling to day-today troubleshooting support and direction.

What is employee assistance?

Employee assistance is Aetna International’s more comprehensive version of what is often referred to as an employee assistance program (EAP). Traditional EAP are employee benefit programs offered by businesses to help employees deal with personal and work-related issues they may have that negatively impact their work performance, health and general well-being. These initiatives usually include assessment, counseling and referral for employees and, often, their immediate family. Access is usually by phone or email.

Our employee assistance service includes all of this as well as other services such as manager support and help with life admin.
What are the benefits of employee assistance?

Employee assistance services can help you work out life’s challenges and problems so you and your family can be healthy and happy.

For example, the services can:

• Ensure you have someone to talk to about any concerns you may have or if you’re experiencing emotional distress relating to:
  - health
  - work
  - relationships (personal and professional)
  - grief over the loss of a loved one
  - marital strife
  - substance abuse

• Connect you with professionals and resources to help you problem solve work and non-work issues

• Coach you through your challenges, helping you get back on track and ensure that your personal issues don’t impact your work

• Offer timely access to training, support and information

If you’re experiencing stress, exhaustion, emotional distress or are overwhelmed by the challenges of managing your life admin (banking and finances, schooling, child care, marriage, divorce, career, work…), you’re not alone. For instance, the World Health Organization states that depression is the leading cause of disability worldwide with some 300 million sufferers. Studies show that after employee assistance services are made available, employee sick leave is reduced by 33 percent, work-related accidents decrease by 65 percent and lost time is reduced by 40 percent. These vital services can go a long way to helping you feel stronger, happier, have a greater sense of well-being and keep on track at work.
Life can be very challenging to navigate for many of us. People across the world reach out to us for help every day. Reasons range from the life-threatening to the mundane. But whether someone needs a tutor for a child, help with a work-related situation, assistance rebuilding a damaged relationship, or rapid response in a crisis, every person who calls or contacts us has a story.

These are a few short stories of real people to show Aetna International’s employee assistance services at work. The names and some details have been changed to protect the anonymity of the individuals.

Dealing with a difficult boss

Location: Indonesia
Solution: Manager assistance services

Dealing with a boss you perceive to be ‘difficult’ can be unsettling. For some employees, quitting their job can seem like the only solution.

An employee called in expressing frustration with his boss, who he said was difficult to work with. Although he had tried several ways to communicate with his boss, he had not been successful. He reported feeling angry and helpless. This was starting to impact his work and he admitted he was considering resigning.

The clinician provided emotional regulation support, which helped him stay calm. They shared the communication efforts he had already made before exploring alternative strategies. By the end of the call, the employee had shifted his focus away from his manager and towards his own inner reactions. The employee said that he needed to learn how to handle interpersonal conflict better, rather than quit his job.

Mother seeking autism testing for son

Location: Canada
Solution: Work-life services

When you live abroad, it can be difficult to find service providers who speak your native language.

A lady in Canada was concerned her son might have a learning disability. She called in requesting help in finding someone who could perform an assessment. She was specifically looking for a provider who spoke Russian, as she and her son spoke Russian primarily.

A consultant identified a service provider in her area that had a staff member who spoke Russian. The consultant shared the information with the woman, who expressed great appreciation for the help.
Help getting healthy sleep
Location: United Arab Emirates
Solution: Mindfulness-based stress reduction service (AWARE)

An Italian man living in Abu Dhabi contacted us for help sleeping. He had recently relocated to the Emirate to head up a new team for a large finance company. His role was challenging, the culture difficult and, after two months, he had yet to settle into his new environment. Rising stress meant the man found it hard to sleep and get back to sleep if awakened in the night. Tiredness was affecting his mood and performance.

Aetna International put him in touch with a professional practitioner who worked on breathing exercises and meditation for sleep. The practitioner worked with the man on mindfulness techniques to “turn down the volume” in his head, be in the moment and destress before bed. He also worked on a routine including breathing exercises and meditation that helped him get off to sleep.

The man’s sleep improved – especially in getting off to sleep - and he even reported using mindfulness to tackle stressful moments at work.

Legal advice in a family dispute
Location: United States
Solution: Work-life services

A lady got in touch for help finding an attorney in the region of her late father’s estate. Through her father’s Last Will and Testimony, the lady and her brother had not only inherited 50 percent of his estate but had inherited his debts as well. To further complicate matters, her brother was intending to sell items from the estate. The lady was in need of a legal advisor with experience in probate law. Following an exhaustive search, the service identified and put the lady in contact with an attorney within network, who had the experience and immediate availability.

Urgent out-of-hours child care
Location: India
Solution: Work-life services

A mother in Than West, Mumbai, was struggling to find temporary child care outside of traditional care operating hours. Her need was urgent, putting significant strain on the mother's emotional state. The mother had a list of requirements, including a provider with on-site cameras to allow her remote visibility of her child. The service consultant conducted an exhaustive search and found a provider that met all of the mother’s requirements, as well as several alternatives which met almost all of her requirements. The mother was delighted and was able to remove a significant road block from her immediate future.
Stress-relieving therapy for high-powered expat

Location: Japan
Solution: Therapeutic counseling

An American CFO contacted us having just moved to Osaka for a three-year assignment. Using iConnectYou, she told the clinician that she felt completely overwhelmed: the pressure of her already demanding role was exacerbated by the challenges of a respectively conservative corporate culture, the language barrier, settling into Japanese life and the relocation of her teenage son.

She and the clinician defined a phone-based course of therapy sessions. Finding the sessions highly beneficial, she continues to arrange phone sessions with a therapist to support her as she develops stress-reduction techniques and builds resilience.

Support to reduce anxiety

Location: Singapore
Solution: Mindfulness-based stress reduction service (AWARE)

Anxiety affects 18 percent of the U.S. population and 13 percent of the UK population impacting work and social lives.

A British woman living in Singapore called us for help. She had just taken a promotion that involved presenting to senior internal teams, and while generally confident, she was very nervous about public speaking. These nerves led to crippling anxiety, which in turn had started to affect the rest of her work and even led to feelings of depression.

Aetna International organised six sessions with an MBSR-trained health and wellness professional who listened to the woman’s concerns, goals and triggers. Together they worked on a plan to tackle the issue that included creating breathing routines and mindfulness to manage stressful moments leading up to and during her presentations.

After a few sessions the woman reported reduced anxiety as well as positive feedback from her line manager about her performance.
Career professional concerned about elder care for ageing parent

Location: United States
Solution: Work-life services

Sometimes having a sympathetic, expert ear can help you unearth and solve the issues underlying your stress or anxiety. A lady in the U.S. was initially looking for some mental health support for herself. The clinician quickly identified that much of the lady’s life strain was caused by worry for her frail, elderly mother who lived alone. The clinician put the lady in touch with an Elder Care research consultant who located several agencies that offered in-home care and met the lady’s requirements, as well as the contact details for a suitable senior centre. As the lady wasn’t aware of her mother’s scope of health needs, the Elder Care consultant was able to recommend a service to conduct an in-home assessment to determine her mother’s long- and short-term care needs as well as low-cost transportation in the mother’s area. This above and beyond approach helped ease much of the lady’s strain and anxiety.

Marriage guidance and couples counseling

Location: Bahrain
Solution: Therapeutic counseling

Events in people’s personal lives have the power to impact their work lives, and relationship issues are some of the most powerful. A German man in Bahrain called us because he was having trouble with stress and motivation at work. Our clinical therapist worked with him to determine the best route for therapy, in this case, a series of face-to-face sessions with a German-speaking counsellor.

In therapy it quickly became clear that the source of his issues was not his job or work, but his relationship with his wife, which had become strained during their relocation. Isolated from friends and family there was increased pressure on his time and attention, and he felt ill-equipped to support her. This in turn impacted his mood at work.

After five sessions, the pair entered couples counseling and Aetna International gave his wife advice about staying in touch with family at home as well as accessing the local German-speaking expat communities.

| Feeling overwhelmed or exhausted? We’re here to help you get through a situation that’s causing you stress, anxiety or depression — such as:
  • grief caused by the death of a loved one,
  • marital strife, or
  • a difficult circumstance at work | When you call us, you’ll speak with a clinical therapist who will help you determine the best route for therapy, whether you’d like to work with a counselor in person or on the phone. The support lasts for up to five weeks to help you move forward through your situation. If you want to continue with treatment, we’ll try to find you a local provider. | When you contact us, you will initially speak to a clinician for a 15 - 45 - minute conversation. The clinician can then help determine the next best steps for you and find the right health care provider for your needs. For instance, the expert will ask you about your situation and emotional state, help you identify your goals and then ask you to participate in recommended therapeutic techniques and exercises. Appointments will be provided within two business days of the initial intake for standard requests and six business hours for urgent requests. Emergency services will be arranged at the time of your call. Therapy sessions last for up to 50 minutes. |

| Experiencing symptoms of stress or anxiety? Struggling with lightheadedness, trouble concentrating, a pounding heart, trouble relaxing or sleeping and mood swings? | We’ll put you in touch with a professional practitioner for one-to-one support. Your practitioner will create a six-week mindfulness plan and help you learn how to put it into practice. The coaching plan comprises one session per week and will be designed to:
• Fit in with your schedule
• Help you develop emotional and mental resiliency
• Help you develop your concentration and focus skills
• Help you improve your sense of well-being
• Guide you through breathwork
• Teach you coping mechanisms to manage your stress and live in the present | When you contact us, the clinical team will assess your needs. If they find that AWARE would be a good option for you, you’ll be connected with a clinical therapist who can best meet your needs. The initial assessment might last 30 - 45 minutes. You’ll have an initial consultation during which you can talk about your current emotional state, your goals and what you’d like to get out of the mindfulness session. You’ll be guided through the development of a personalized plan with impactful weekly mindfulness techniques and exercises.
The resulting six sessions with an mindfulness-based stress reduction (MBSR) -trained health and wellness professional are scheduled for a mutually agreed time between you and a coach.
Session duration is usually 20 - 30 minutes, and the course lasts around six weeks. |
